

Benjamin A Hohmuth, MD, MPH

Dr. Hohmuth is the Chief Medical Informatics Officer and a practicing hospitalist at Geisinger Health System. He has held prior operational roles as director of hospital medicine and director of patient blood management. He completed his internal medicine residency at Brigham and Women's Hospital in 2002, a Master of Public Health at Columbia University in 2012, and is board certified in both internal medicine and informatics. Dr. Hohmuth provides committee service to several organizations including the Society of Hospital Medicine and the American Board of Internal Medicine. Areas of interest include usability of the electronic health record, patient safety, and clinical diagnosis.